

Daisy May's BBQ

623 11th Avenue
New York, NY 10036
Cross Street: 46th Street
Phone: (212) 977-1500

Member Reviews -- Sorted by Most Recent

Positive | Negative | Most Recent | Most Helpful

User Rating: Highly Recommended

Who Knew Such Fab BBQ Existed In NYC?? Posted by onehipchick on 06/10/2004

Sure it's way the heck on the West Side (46th & 11th Ave) and it's a trek and a half to a small hole-in-the-wall with no seating, but MAN is it worth company creamy co

beans...al
off the bo jars...you but who c

Pros: amaz

User Rati

I loved it I just got about, be was huge slaw that As far as Very nice smell of t

Citysearch Editorial Review

By Paul Adams

Editorial Rating: Highly Recommended

Terrifically succulent barbecue, delivered citywide from a far-West-Side shack.

The Scene

The interior of this corner spot is handsomely decorated in bright wood, yet offers little invitation to linger: There are no seats and only a narrow counter for those who insist on eating in. By far the more popular option is delivery, which is free anywhere in the city.

The Food

Rather than limiting the menu to one type of masterful barbecue, here you'll find a sampler of several regional styles. Pork ribs come Kansas City-style, with a sweet, smoky glaze, or with a hotter Memphis-style dry-rub. Choosing favorites is moot, though, amid so much super-tender meat. Course-chopped brisket tastes of smoke and garlic; pulled pork has a mellow vinegary bite. The sides, like dense, chunky mashed potatoes with rich red-eye gravy, cheesy corn kernels and intensely creamy spinach, are just as excellent. Wash down a huge portion with a Mason jar of perfect sweet iced tea.

Editorial content is independent of paid advertisers. Visits are made anonymously, and expenses are paid for by Citysearch.